

Week 1 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:04 UTC.

Intro

Week 1 in FoulknFootball always carries a little extra light. The standings are clean, every roster still makes sense in its own mind, and one Sunday is enough to confirm just about anything if you let it. So naturally, we do. Unstoppable Farce and First in and First Out? gave the league its highest-scoring game right away, a 198.54-176.94 result that felt like a reminder that good weeks can still lose, and Rob's opening number was strong enough to put him straight on top of the table.

Four teams opened 1-0, four teams opened 0-1, and even the narrowest result had its own Week 1 truth to it: BearDown escaped Disappointment by 1.42, which is a very small margin and a very familiar way for early expectations to start shifting.

League Themes

The first week's headline performers came from the top of the standings, and the quarterback position set the tone. Dave got the league's biggest individual score from Josh Allen at 38.76 in He hate me's win, while Rob paired Lamar Jackson's 29.36 with Derrick Henry's 28.2 to build the highest team total of the week. Devin took the loss, but Justin Fields at 29.52 was a clear bright spot for Amon Another level , and Brian's 176.94 would have beaten half the league behind Justin Herbert's 27.92. That is the Week 1 lesson in a sentence: sometimes the lineup works and the matchup does not.

On the waiver front, Jake got the most immediate return. Quentin Johnston delivered 19.9 points for Seasonal Depression, and in an opening week full of speculative adds, that one produced on the field right away. Tre Tucker added 11.4 for Jake as well, so there was real support behind a team that finished just behind Rob for the second-highest score of the week. Michael also found usable points with Calvin Austin's 13, and that mattered in a game decided by 1.42.

There was one trade already sitting on the early-season ledger, and it was modest but worth noting because these are the moves that tend to look different in November than they do in September. Rob received Zamir White, while Dave received Jake Moody. Neither side got Week 1 production from the incoming piece, so for now it stays what most January trades are at first glance: a quiet reshaping move, not a verdict.

No stat-line oddities made the board this week, and that fits the opening frame. There are no long streaks to honor or drag into view yet, and no trend line deserves more weight than one game can carry. The power table does tell us something useful, though. Unstoppable Farce, Seasonal Depression, and He hate me separated themselves immediately, while First in and First Out? landing fourth in power despite an 0-1 record may be the cleanest signal that Brian's opener was stronger than the standings alone suggest.

Game by Game

Unstoppable Farce (198.54) vs First in and First Out? (176.94)

Rob rides Lamar and Henry past Brian in Week 1.

Week 1 in FoulknFootball brought one of those sturdy opening-night scorelines, where both teams cleared well into the 170s and still left room on the board. Unstoppable Farce came out of it with the better number, beating First in and First Out? 198.54 to 176.94, and Rob did it the way owners prefer in September: with stars delivering like stars.

The center of it was Baltimore. Lamar Jackson gave Rob 29.36 points against Buffalo, with 209 passing yards, two touchdown passes, 70 rushing yards and a rushing score, and Derrick Henry added 28.20 on 169 rushing yards and two touchdowns. Jalen Hurts supplied another 24.28 for Unstoppable Farce, and that two-quarterback foundation gave Rob a calm advantage even with quiet lines from Xavier Worthy at 0.00 and Mark Andrews at 0.50.

Meanwhile, Brian had plenty that worked. Justin Herbert was sharp for the Chargers with 318 passing yards and three touchdowns on his way to 27.92 points, Zay Flowers turned nine targets into 143 yards and a touchdown for 21.10, and Bijan Robinson added 18.40 through the air-heavy route of six catches, 100 receiving yards and a score. And yet, First in and First Out? carried just a few too many soft spots to keep pace, with Detroit's defense at 0.00, Tank Bigsby at 1.20, T.J. Hockenson at 1.50, Nico Collins at 2.50, and Jaylen Waddle at 3.00.

There was one simple difference in this matchup. Rob got 81.84 combined from Lamar Jackson, Derrick Henry and Jalen Hurts, while Brian's best answers came in smaller pieces across the lineup. In a league format this deep, a team can survive one zero, but it is hard to absorb several near-zeros when the other side is stacking elite quarterback play with a Baltimore rushing avalanche.

The immediate consequence is clean enough: Rob opens the FoulknFootball season at 1-0, and Unstoppable Farce takes an early step into the top half of the regular-season race while Brian starts 0-1 despite posting 176.94.

Seasonal Depression (197.70) vs Amon Another level (143.74)

Jake rides a deeper Week 1 card past Devin.

Week 1 in FoulknFootball usually asks a simple question: who has enough steady work across the board to let one spike game matter. Jake had that answer early, and by the time Seasonal Depression closed at 197.70, the shape of this one was clear. Devin got a strong night from Justin Fields, but Amon Another level finished at 143.74 and spent too much of the weekend waiting for the bigger names to arrive.

The hero was J.J. McCarthy. The Minnesota quarterback gave Jake 22.22 points on 143 passing yards, two touchdown passes, and a rushing score, and he had plenty of support around him. Javonte Williams added 18.40 with two rushing touchdowns for Dallas, Garrett Wilson of the Jets scored 15.50 on seven catches for 95 yards and a touchdown, and Michael Pittman chipped in 14.00 with six catches for 80 yards and a score.

Meanwhile, Jake kept stacking useful numbers even where the ceiling was modest. Josh Jacobs scored 13.00 for Green Bay, Kyren Williams gave him 12.90 for the Rams, Puka Nacua caught 10 balls for 130 yards on his way to 13.10, and Denver's defense supplied 16.00. That is usually enough in any Week 1 showdown, especially when the floor holds at kicker as Ka'imi Fairbairn added 13.00.

On the other side, Devin's best player was clear. Fields, now with Kansas City, put up 29.52 with 218 passing yards, 48 rushing yards, and two rushing touchdowns, and Saquon Barkley's 14.40 plus J.K. Dobbins' 12.80 gave Amon Another level a workable spine. And yet, the wide receiver room never really turned the corner:

Justin Jefferson scored 10.80, while Stefon Diggs, Chris Olave, Tyreek Hill, Amon-Ra St. Brown, and DeVonta Smith all stayed at 5.70 or below.

The immediate consequence is straightforward. Jake leaves the opening week at 1-0 in FoulknFootball, and Seasonal Depression already has one of the stronger point totals on the board at 197.70.

He hate me (180.00) vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday (158.94)

Dave leans on Josh Allen, and He hate me opens with a Week 1 win.

Week 1 in FoulknFootball usually asks a simple question. Can a roster carry its weak spots long enough for its stars to matter. Dave's He hate me answered yes, posting 180.00 and turning back Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday, 158.94, in a steady opening-week result.

The hero was Josh Allen, and there was no need to overstate it. Buffalo's quarterback gave Dave 38.76 points behind 394 passing yards, two touchdown passes, and two more scores on the ground. James Cook added 16.20 in that same Bills offense, Chuba Hubbard chipped in 14.90 for Carolina, and Alvin Kamara found the end zone for New Orleans with 11.70. Dave did not need a perfect card, because Allen gave him enough room to absorb quieter days from Bo Nix, Matthew Golden, and Davante Adams.

On the other side, Eric had plenty that worked. Jayden Daniels opened with 20.12 for Washington, Breece Hall ran for 107 yards on his way to 14.50, Christian McCaffrey handled volume for 14.20, and the Rams defense supplied 12.00. Courtland Sutton's touchdown brought 12.10, while CeeDee Lamb turned 13 targets into 110 receiving yards and 11.00 points. And yet, too many of Eric's receivers stopped short of a true difference-making afternoon, with Terry McLaurin at 2.70, Calvin Ridley at 2.70, and Mike Evans at 5.10.

One sharp note from the box score tells the story. Dave got the best performance in the matchup by a wide margin, and Eric never really found the matching spike week needed to close it.

The specific Week 1 consequence is straightforward: Dave leaves the opening weekend at 1-0 in FoulknFootball, while Eric starts 0-1, and the first head-to-head result is already on Dave's side.

BearDown (139.42) vs Disappointment (138.00)

BearDown edges Disappointment by 1.42 behind Caleb Williams.

Week 1 in FoulknFootball opened with one of those narrow Sunday scoreboards that asked for a second look. BearDown slipped past Disappointment, 139.42 to 138.00, and Dakota did it with just enough at the top of the lineup to survive a handful of light returns elsewhere.

Caleb Williams was the hero for BearDown. The Chicago quarterback gave Dakota 24.2 points on 210 passing yards, a passing touchdown, 58 rushing yards, and a rushing score, and that dual-threat line gave the rest of the roster some room to breathe. Deebo Samuel added 15.6, Marvin Harrison chipped in 13.1 for Arizona against New Orleans, and Travis Kelce found the end zone for Kansas City on his way to 10.7.

On the other side, Michael had the biggest single total in the game from Patrick Mahomes, who posted 26.02 with 258 passing yards, 57 rushing yards, and two total touchdowns, while Baker Mayfield added 22.58 and kept Disappointment very much in range. Ricky Pearsall's 108 receiving yards led to 10.8, Jakobi Meyers caught 8 balls for 97 yards and 9.7 points, and the kickers did their part with 10 from Brandon Aubrey and 11 from Tyler Loop.

And yet this was decided in the thinner parts of each lineup. Disappointment absorbed 0.8 from A.J. Brown, 0.3 from Ollie Gordon, and -2.0 from the Ravens defense, while BearDown managed to withstand 2.6 from Ja'Marr Chase, 1.0 from Xavier Legette, and 1.2 from Josh Downs because Chris Boswell's 14.0 and the Patriots' 7.0 gave Dakota the steadier floor. That was the sharp difference in a 1.42-point game: not dominance, just fewer empty spaces.

The immediate consequence is simple and tangible. BearDown leaves the opening week at 1-0 in FoulknFootball, and Disappointment starts 0-1 despite getting 48.6 combined points from Mahomes and Mayfield.

Storylines

- Rob opens Week 2 from the top spot, and the question is whether Unstoppable Farce can turn one big number into an early tier of its own.
- Michael and Devin meet at 0-1 after very different losses, with one coming down to 1.42 and the other against the week's second-highest score.
- BearDown sits on the playoff bubble at 1-0 despite the league's slimmest winning margin, which makes Week 2 a useful test of staying power.
- Brian's team lost with 176.94 and still sits fourth in the power rankings, so the next result will tell us whether that was bad luck or a real signal.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	1-0-0	W1	198.54	176.94
2	Seasonal Depression	Jake	1-0-0	W1	197.70	143.74
3	He hate me	Dave	1-0-0	W1	180.00	158.94
4	BearDown	Dakota	1-0-0	W1	139.42	138.00
5	First in and First Out?	Brian	0-1-0	L1	176.94	198.54
6	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	0-1-0	L1	158.94	180.00
7	Amon Another level	Devin	0-1-0	L1	143.74	197.70
8	Disappointment	Michael	0-1-0	L1	138.00	139.42

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	100.0	198.54
2	—	Seasonal Depression	Jake	99.6	197.70
3	—	He hate me	Dave	92.1	180.00
4	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	75.8	176.94

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
5	—	BearDown	Dakota	74.7	139.42
6	—	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	68.0	158.94
7	—	Amon Another level	Devin	61.5	143.74
8	—	Disappointment	Michael	59.1	138.00

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Unstoppable Farce	186.8 – 136.1	Lock	Projection gap sets the tone
Amon Another level vs Disappointment	Disappointment	129.6 – 121.4	Lean	Narrow projection edge for Michael
Seasonal Depression vs BearDown	Seasonal Depression	161.3 – 112.8	Lock	Jake's No. 2 power ranking
He hate me vs First in and First Out?	He hate me	167.9 – 163.2	Coin Flip	Dave holds slight projection edge

Predictions

- Unstoppable Farce opens 2-0 and stays in the No. 1 power spot if Rob clears 180 points again. The projection already gives him the week's widest margin.
- Disappointment wins by at least 7 points, and Michael climbs out of No. 8 in the power picture after entering Week 2 with the small projection edge.
- Seasonal Depression handles BearDown by 40 or more, which would keep Jake in the top two and drop Dakota to 1-1 despite opening the year in the projected playoff field.
- He hate me and First in and First Out? finish within 5 points of each other, the tightest game on the Week 2 board, but Dave moves to 2-0.