

Week 5 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:31 UTC.

Stakes this week

- First in and First Out? on a 4-game win streak — Brian's squad has been rolling — next opponent has to break the streak.
- Unstoppable Farce on a 4-game losing streak — Rob's squad needs a win to stop the bleeding.

Intro

Five weeks into the regular season, FoulknFootball is starting to ask a different question. It is not only who has the strongest first lineup, but who can keep a week intact once byes begin to pull pieces off the board and the waiver wire starts to matter every day. That is usually where a clean early read gets tested, and this week offered a good example. Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday posted the league's top score at 214.00, while Brian's First in and First Out? kept its longer run moving with a narrow 199.44–197.12 win that said just as much about steadiness as ceiling.

That is the shape of the league right now. Brian remains on top and has now won four straight, BearDown has climbed into the part of the table that matters most, and a few teams with workable season totals are still finding out that one thin spot can turn a Sunday. The sharp point is simple: in FoulknFootball, 150 is no longer the standard of comfort it was in September.

League Themes

The highest-scoring game belonged to Eric, and Sanders Boutte on Sunday needed the full spread of it. Rico Dowdle led the week at 29.4, C.J. Stroud added 28.76, and that pairing gave Eric the kind of quarterback-backfield punch that can carry a card through thinner spots elsewhere. Around the league, Jonathan Taylor's 28.6 kept Brian's offense on schedule in another win, Dak Prescott's 28.28 powered Dakota, and Sam Darnold's 27.64 nearly pushed Jake over the line in the week's closest result. There is a larger pattern here as well, because Brian, Jake, and Dave have all now scored 150 or more in five straight weeks, and Brian's four-game winning streak continues to look like something sturdier than a hot month.

The best waiver return was Jake's addition of AJ Barner, who delivered 17.3 points at tight end in a game decided by 2.32. That is the kind of move that does not always swing the result, but it keeps a team competitive enough for everything else to matter. Devin also found a useful piece in Kendrick Bourne at 14.2, Dakota got a workable 14.74 from Carson Wentz, and Brian squeezed 13.3 from Michael Carter without needing it to rescue the week. There were no trades in FoulknFootball this week, which left the wire as the clearest place for owners to cover the first strain of the bye weeks.

A few player lines bent the week away from expectation. Rico Dowdle's 29.4 on a 4.1 projection was the loudest number, and Jacory Croskey-Merritt's 25.0 on a 7.7 projection was right behind it. Stroud more than doubled his mark, and Darnold did much the same. On the other side, James Cook's 4.9 against a 19.8 projection hurt, Travis Etienne's 5.8 against 15.2 left a dent, and Quentin Johnston's 2.9 against 14.4 was the kind of receiver miss that can flatten a lineup quickly once depth gets tested. The biggest power-rating drop belonged to Michael, down three spots to eighth, and that slide fits a team that now has the week's low score at 154.08 despite still sitting in a crowded middle.

Game by Game

First in and First Out? (199.44) vs Seasonal Depression (197.12)

Brian holds off Jake as First in and First Out? edges Seasonal Depression.

Week 5 in FoulknFootball brought the kind of meeting the standings had been pointing toward, and it landed exactly where those early numbers suggested it might. Brian's First in and First Out? slipped past Jake's Seasonal Depression, 199.44 to 197.12, in a game where both lineups cleared projections with room to spare and neither side gave much away. It was a deep-board result, and the margin was just 2.32.

Jonathan Taylor was the hero for Brian. Indianapolis' back scored 28.6 with three rushing touchdowns against Las Vegas, while Jaylen Waddle added 17.0 for Denver on six catches for 110 yards and a score, Kareem Hunt supplied 17.7 with two rushing touchdowns, and the Colts defense gave Brian another 17.0. We missed the call coming in. The pick was Jake in a coin flip, but the 150-plus streak pressure we flagged on Brian never arrived; instead, First in and First Out? pushed that standard higher in a 199.44-point answer.

On the other side, Jake had more than enough to win most weeks. Sam Darnold led the way with 27.64 for Seattle against Tampa Bay, Javonte Williams gave Dallas 25.9, Rachaad White added 19.1 for Washington, and Ka'imi Fairbairn's 18.0 kept Seasonal Depression on pace all afternoon. And yet, in a game this tight, the quieter receiver spots mattered. Quentin Johnston's 2.9, Jameson Williams' 1.0, and Darius Slayton's 1.1 left Jake needing every bit of his stronger work elsewhere.

There was one lineup note in the background, though it does not overwhelm the result. Jake left 25.4 coulda-shoulda points on the bench, with Jordan Addison's 10.1 and Dillon Gabriel's 16.1 standing out, while Brian's bench left only 7.0 unused. The sharper point is simpler: Brian survived 5.8 from Travis Etienne and 1.5 from Jerry Jeudy because his scoring was spread across the card, and Jake's misses were clustered in places that are harder to carry.

The consequence is clear at the top of FoulknFootball. Brian extends the winning streak from three games to four and keeps First in and First Out? in first place, while Jake's four-week run of 150 or more continues even in defeat.

BearDown (190.72) vs He hate me (178.34)

Dakota and BearDown outlast Dave's He hate me behind Prescott's four-touchdown day.

Week 5 in FoulknFootball brought two of the league's steadier early teams into the same window, and this one played to the size of the totals. Dakota's BearDown beat Dave's He hate me, 190.72 to 178.34, in a matchup that cleared expectations on both sides and never really turned on just one weak spot. The hero was Dak Prescott. Dallas' quarterback gave BearDown 28.28 points against the Jets on 237 passing yards and four touchdowns, and that set the tone for a lineup that kept finding useful answers.

The numbers around Prescott were good enough to matter. Ja'Marr Chase of the Bengals scored 23.0 on six catches for 110 yards and two touchdowns against Detroit, Deebo Samuel added 15.6, and both Travis Kelce of Kansas City and David Njoku found the end zone from the tight end spots. BearDown also got 9.0 each from kickers Cam Little and Matt Gay. The sharp point is simple: Dakota got to 190.72 even with lighter returns from Omarion Hampton at 7.0, Wan'Dale Robinson at 3.2, and Brian Robinson at 1.2.

On the other side, Dave had enough production to win most weeks. Emeka Egbuka of Tampa Bay led He hate me with 24.3 on seven catches for 163 yards and a touchdown against Seattle, Kyren Williams gave the Rams 23.1, Jaxon Smith-Njigba added 19.2, Sam LaPorta scored 15.2, and Dave still got solid quarterback work from Jared Goff and Josh Allen. And yet, the quieter returns arrived in too many backfield places at once. James Cook managed 4.9 for Buffalo against New England, Alvin Kamara had 5.5 for New Orleans, RJ Harvey scored 3.0, and Brock Bowers gave Dave a zero at tight end.

There was one clean lineup note in the background. Dave left 25.56 from Matthew Stafford on the bench, while Dakota's coulda-shoulda number was just 5.9, and that helps explain why a strong 178.34 still finished second. BearDown did not need much correction; it simply needed its best players to carry their share, and they did.

The consequence is clear. Dakota hands Dave his first loss since Week 2, ending He hate me's two-game winning streak from last week's ledger, and BearDown follows its Week 4 rise with the kind of win that should keep pressure on the top tier of FoulknFootball.

Sanders Boutte on Sunday (214.00) vs Disappointment (154.08)

Eric gets the broad answer Sanders Boutte on Sunday needed.

Week 5 in FoulknFootball brought together two teams that had been searching for a cleaner Sunday, and Eric found one in full. Sanders Boutte on Sunday beat Michael's Disappointment 214.00 to 154.08, turning a projected gap in the other direction into one of the week's clearest results. It started with depth and stayed there, because Eric kept finding points in one spot after another while Michael was left carrying too many quiet returns.

The headline number belonged to Rico Dowdle. Pittsburgh's back gave Eric 29.4 points on 206 rushing yards, a touchdown, and three catches, and C.J. Stroud was just as important with 28.76 for Houston on four touchdown passes against Baltimore. Christian McCaffrey added 19.9 for San Francisco, Rashid Shaheed brought 17.4 for Seattle, and Eric got useful rushing work from Breece Hall, Nick Chubb, and Zach Charbonnet. The sharp point is simple: Sanders Boutte on Sunday reached 214.00 even with only 2.6 from Chris Godwin and 1.5 from Mike Gesicki.

On the other side, Michael had enough quarterback production to stay respectable. Patrick Mahomes scored 26.72 for Kansas City, Baker Mayfield added 26.66 for Tampa Bay, and Jake Ferguson's two-touchdown day gave Disappointment 16.9 from the Dallas tight end. And yet, the forecast missed this one cleanly. The call last week was Disappointment over Sanders Boutte on Sunday, but the losing streak we cited for Eric ended because Michael got too little from too many lineup spots at once — 0.0 from Malik Washington, 1.1 from Bhayshul Tuten, 3.2 from Jakobi Meyers, and -2.0 from the Ravens defense.

There was not much hidden on either bench to change the read. Eric left 9.3 coulda-shoulda points unused, Michael left 6.0, so this was not a start/sit story as much as one roster arriving with the fuller card. Meanwhile, Eric also got 12.0 from Chase McLaughlin, 8.0 from Matt Prater, and 8.0 from Buffalo's defense, the kind of supporting work that turns a good score into a runaway.

The consequence is immediate. Eric snaps the two-game losing streak Sanders Boutte on Sunday carried into Week 5, while Michael drops a second straight after opening 2-1 in FoulknFootball.

Amon Another level (192.32) vs Unstoppable Farce (166.48)

Devin gets the broader card, and Amon Another level turns back Rob.

Week 5 in FoulknFootball brought two 1-3 teams into a game that mattered a little more than the records might suggest, and Devin gave it the steadier shape. Amon Another level beat Rob's Unstoppable Farce, 192.32 to 166.48, clearing a projected edge and sustaining it with scoring all across the lineup. This was not one player carrying the afternoon. It was Devin getting enough, and then a little more, from nearly every section of the roster.

The hero was Justin Fields. Kansas City's quarterback gave Devin 25.92 points against Dallas on 283 passing yards and 2 touchdown throws, while Jaxson Dart added 15.58 for the Giants against New Orleans. Around them, David Montgomery delivered 17.22 for Houston against Cincinnati, Saquon Barkley scored 14.8 for Philadelphia against Denver, Stefon Diggs caught 10 balls for 146 yards and 14.6 points, and Justin Jefferson added 12.3 for Minnesota. The sharp point is simple: Amon Another level reached 192.32 even with the Jets defense at -3.0 and Amon-Ra St. Brown finishing 6.85 points short of projection.

On the other side, Rob had enough production to win plenty of weeks. Jacory Croskey-Merritt was excellent for Washington, rushing for 111 yards and 2 touchdowns on his way to 25.0 points, and Jalen Hurts paired with Bo Nix for 37.38 combined points at quarterback. Darren Waller chipped in 13.8, De'Von Achane gave Miami 10.6, and Rob got useful defensive help from Houston's 11.0 and Kansas City's 8.0. And yet, the thinner spots were hard to cover. Woody Marks gave just 2.4 for Houston against Baltimore, Mark Andrews had 2.2 for the Ravens, and Unstoppable Farce never quite matched Devin's depth.

There was one lineup note in the background, but not enough to rewrite the result. Rob left 26.24 from Trevor Lawrence on the bench, while Devin's bench offered only 8.3 coulda-shoulda points in total, so this reads less like one missed start/sit call and more like Amon Another level winning the fuller board.

The consequence is clear in FoulknFootball. Devin moves out of the Week 4 seventh-place slot by handing Rob a fourth straight loss, and Unstoppable Farce must regroup after another strong score still was not enough.

Storylines

- Brian's four-game winning streak now meets the team with the lowest power rank, and that is how first place starts to separate if it is going to.
- The line between fourth and fifth is in play for Devin and Dave, with Amon Another level trying to turn one win into real pressure on the projected playoff field.
- Rob has dropped four straight, so Week 6 is less about style points and more about stopping the table from stretching away.
- Jake and Eric arrive from opposite Week 5 outcomes, but both still carry season-long scoring profiles that say the middle of FoulknFootball is not settled.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	4-1-0	W4	1014.28	875.44
2	Seasonal Depression	Jake	3-2-0	L1	928.54	841.12

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
3	He hate me	Dave	3-2-0	L1	918.24	926.16
4	BearDown	Dakota	3-2-0	W2	844.36	821.54
5	Amon Another level	Devin	2-3-0	W1	857.00	932.02
6	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	2-3-0	W1	828.20	834.68
7	Disappointment	Michael	2-3-0	L2	799.30	851.32
8	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	1-4-0	L4	848.56	956.20

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	97.0	201.62
2	▲ 1	Seasonal Depression	Jake	87.4	188.74
3	▽ 1	He hate me	Dave	86.8	188.16
4	—	BearDown	Dakota	82.1	183.27
5	▲ 1	Amon Another level	Devin	79.8	183.88
6	▲ 2	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	75.8	167.09
7	—	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	75.4	177.29
8	▽ 3	Disappointment	Michael	72.9	158.51

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W4), BearDown (W2). Cold spell: Unstoppable Farce (L4), Disappointment (L2).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 5 straight weeks.
- Seasonal Depression has scored 150+ in 5 straight weeks.
- He hate me has scored 150+ in 5 straight weeks.
- BearDown has scored 150+ in 4 straight weeks.
- Amon Another level has scored 150+ in 4 straight weeks.
- Disappointment has scored 150+ in 4 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs BearDown	BearDown	133.8 – 125.1	Lean	BearDown 150+ in four straight

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Amon Another level vs He hate me	He hate me	158.7 – 151.2	Lean	He hate me 150+ in five straight
Disappointment vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	164.1 – 145.6	Lean	Five straight weeks above 150
Seasonal Depression vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Seasonal Depression	166.8 – 131.7	Lock	Seasonal Depression 150+ in five straight

Predictions

- BearDown wins by 7 to 12 points, extending its winning streak to 3 games while Unstoppable Farce's slide reaches 5 straight losses.
- He hate me clears 155 points and holds Amon Another level under 154, preserving its place in the top tier of the power table.
- First in and First Out? scores at least 160 points and pushes its winning streak to 5, while staying on pace to protect the No. 1 seed.
- Seasonal Depression wins by 30 or more, reaches 6 straight weeks of 150+ points, and remains firmly inside the top 2 of the league pecking order.