

Week 7 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:33 UTC.

Stakes this week

- Hottest team in the league — First in and First Out? has won 6 straight — Brian hasn't lost in over a month and a half. Anyone drawing them is the underdog by default.

Intro

By the middle of the season, FoulknFootball starts to tell the truth. The records matter, the scoring trends matter, and the easy explanations begin to run out. Week 7 gave that feeling a clean outline. Michael posted the league's top number at 247.10 in Disappointment's win over Rob, while Brian kept First in and First Out? in first place with a sixth straight victory. Those are different stories on the surface, but they point to the same place. Some teams are settling into contender form, and some are being pushed toward harder decisions.

That pressure is strongest around the middle and lower half of the table, where a strong Sunday still changes the mood but no longer clears the larger questions. Brian's run now sits at six straight, Jake is still matching the league's upper standard week after week, and the race around the last projected playoff spot remains crowded enough that one big score can move a team quickly. Michael's jump from last to fifth in one week was the sharpest example. It was also a reminder that in FoulknFootball, a season can look stable right up until one lineup breaks it open.

League Themes

The league leader remains the clearest story. Brian has now won six straight, and First in and First Out? has scored 150 or more in all seven weeks. There is a steadiness to that profile, even when the weekly names change. Jonathan Taylor gave Brian 31.2, Justin Herbert added 27.9, and the result was another Sunday in which the top team did not need to chase its identity because it already knows what it is.

Michael supplied the week's loudest answer. Disappointment led the league at 247.10 behind Jahmyr Gibbs' 33.8, and that total did more than win a game. It pushed Michael up two spots in the power rankings, the biggest move of the week, and back onto the playoff bubble at 3-4. That kind of week does not erase the uneven first month, but it does change the conversation around a roster that looked buried not long ago.

Rob lost the matchup, but Bo Nix was the top individual scorer in FoulknFootball at 39.96 and gave Unstoppable Farce one more reminder that the ceiling still exists. The harder truth is that ceiling has not arrived with enough cover. Rob also made the most productive waiver move of the week by adding Oronde Gadsden and getting 22.4 right away, while Michael's pickup of Joe Flacco returned 25.98 and played a direct part in the highest score on the board. Those are the kinds of waiver hits that keep a team pushing rather than drifting.

There were no trades this week, which fits the moment in its own way. The top of the league has little reason to force action, and the teams below it are still deciding whether to push harder or trust what is already rostered. That makes the odd player lines feel even more important. Gibbs beat his projection by a wide margin, and Bo Nix did the same, while David Montgomery, Sam Darnold, Kyren Williams, Caleb Williams, and George Pickens all came in well short of expectation. In a week defined by clearer team shapes, those misses still had the power to tilt the table.

A few season-long markers are now too consistent to ignore. Seasonal Depression has also cleared 150 in all seven weeks, and He hate me has done the same, which is why Jake's narrow win over Dave felt important beyond the margin. Sanders Boutte on Sunday, meanwhile, has reached 150 in four straight weeks and climbed one spot in the power rankings, a quiet rise that keeps Eric squarely in the middle of the playoff traffic. The league is not separating cleanly from top to bottom, but it is becoming easier to tell which teams can absorb a bad line and which teams cannot.

Game by Game

Disappointment (247.10) vs Unstoppable Farce (161.60)

Michael gets the fuller card as Disappointment rolls past Rob.

Week 7 in FoulknFootball had the shape of a close projection and turned into something much cleaner on the field. Michael's Disappointment handled Rob's Unstoppable Farce, 247.10 to 161.60, a margin built on volume, balance, and one star turn that set the tone. The hero was Jahmyr Gibbs. Detroit's back gave Michael 33.8 points against Tampa Bay, with 136 rushing yards, 82 receiving yards, and two rushing touchdowns.

The strength of Disappointment was that Gibbs was hardly working alone. Drake Maye added 23.08 for New England against Tennessee, A.J. Brown gave Philadelphia 24.1 against Minnesota on two touchdown catches, and Michael also got 18.0 from Will Reichard, 16.0 from Brandon Aubrey, 15.8 from Jaylen Warren, 15.6 from Tee Higgins, 14.9 from Jake Ferguson, and 14.8 from Rhamondre Stevenson. And yet, the number that says the most may be Luke McCaffrey's 0.0, because Michael still reached 247.10 with a dead spot in the lineup and very little left unused on the bench.

On the other side, Rob had the best quarterback in the matchup. Bo Nix was excellent for Denver against the Giants, finishing with 39.96 points behind 279 passing yards, two passing touchdowns, 48 rushing yards, and two more scores on the ground, while Jalen Hurts supplied 24.04 for Philadelphia and the Kansas City defense added 13.0. Meanwhile, too many other spots stayed light at the same time. Darren Waller and Jalen Coker each finished at 0.0, Brian Thomas managed 3.1, Jacory Croskey-Merritt had 3.2, and Kimani Vidal scored 3.5.

There was also real help left on Rob's bench, where Travis Hunter's 16.1 and Houston's 20.0 on defense stood out in a 35.1 coulda-shoulda total. Michael, by contrast, left just 2.2 points behind, so this was one of those weeks where the winning lineup was not only stronger but cleaner. A single sharp difference told the story: Disappointment got production from nearly every section of the roster, while Unstoppable Farce needed its quarterbacks to cover too many quiet positions.

The consequence is immediate. Michael snaps the three-game losing streak that Disappointment carried out of Week 6, and does it by handing Rob's Unstoppable Farce a result that stops its own brief one-game uptick.

Sanders Boutte on Sunday (188.30) vs Amon Another level (176.76)

Eric gets enough star power to hold off Devin.

Week 7 in FoulknFootball had the look of a game that would need real scoring on both sides, and it got there. Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday beat Devin's Amon Another level, 188.30 to 176.76, in a matchup that cleared the league's usual weekly bar by a comfortable margin on both benches. The hero was Christian McCaffrey.

San Francisco's back gave Eric 32.1 points against Atlanta, with 129 rushing yards, 72 receiving yards, and two rushing touchdowns, and Trey McBride added another firm lift with 19.4 on 10 catches and two scores for Arizona against Green Bay.

The call last week to ride Sanders Boutte on Sunday held up, but it was right team, wrong shape. The projection said 154.2 to 145.0; the reality was far richer, because both lineups produced well past expectation. Eric also got 17.74 from Washington quarterback Jayden Daniels, 17.0 from CeeDee Lamb for Dallas, and 12.0 from the Rams defense, which mattered on a day when Mike Evans gave him 0.0 and Nick Chubb managed just 1.1.

On the other side, Devin had enough quality to win most weeks. The Cleveland defense was his best answer at 26.0, while DeVonta Smith gave Philadelphia 24.3 against Minnesota and Chris Olave added 21.8 for New Orleans with two touchdown catches against Chicago. Evan McPherson's 15.0 and Amon-Ra St. Brown's 14.6 kept Amon Another level moving, and yet the quarterback spot bent the result; Justin Fields scored 4.04, and that was a hard number to carry in an 11.54-point game.

There was bench help available for both teams, a little more for Devin than Eric. Jaxson Dart's 28.42 and Kyle Monangai's 15.4 sat unused for Devin, while Eric left 17.5 from Zach Charbonnet on the bench. But this game reads more cleanly through the starters who did connect, and Eric's best players were a touch stronger at the top of the card.

The consequence is a meaningful one in the middle of the FoulknFootball table. Eric was 2-4 entering the week, just ahead of Devin at 2-4, and this result gives Sanders Boutte on Sunday the cleaner hold on that spot as both owners look to stay attached to the league's middle tier.

First in and First Out? (189.14) vs BearDown (173.64)

Brian keeps First in and First Out? moving, holding off Dakota's BearDown 189.14–173.64.

Week 7 in FoulknFootball had the look of a game that would demand real offense on both sides, and it got exactly that. Brian's First in and First Out? beat Dakota's BearDown, 189.14 to 173.64, in a matchup where both teams cleared their projections and neither side had much room for passenger spots. The hero was Jonathan Taylor. Indianapolis' back gave Brian 31.2 points against the Chargers with 94 rushing yards, 38 receiving yards, and three touchdowns, and that was the cleanest edge in a game decided by 15.50.

Brian's best work came from the top of the lineup. Justin Herbert threw for 420 yards and three touchdowns for the Chargers and scored 27.9, Patrick Mahomes added 26.24 for Kansas City against Las Vegas, and Quinshon Judkins supplied 26.4 for Cleveland with three rushing touchdowns against Miami. And yet, this was not a spotless card: Rome Odunze scored 3.1, Nico Collins 2.7, Jaylen Waddle 1.5, and T.J. Hockenson 4.3, which makes the win easier to understand because the heavy pieces were heavy enough to cover the lighter ones.

On the other side, Dakota had more than enough production to win most weeks. Dak Prescott gave BearDown 23.26 with three touchdown passes for Dallas against Washington, Ja'Marr Chase caught 16 balls for 161 yards and a touchdown for Cincinnati and scored 22.1, and the Patriots defense added 19.0. Xavier Legette chipped in 15.2, Cam Skattebo had 15.4, and Zach Ertz brought 9.7, but the sharp turn in the matchup came at quarterback, where Caleb Williams managed just 4.68 for Chicago against New Orleans.

There was some help left unused for Dakota, with Tyrone Tracy's 10.6 and Jonnu Smith's 8.8 leading a 23.24-point coulda-shoulda total, while Brian left only 7.2 behind. Meanwhile, as both owners look at the week honestly, this result reads less like a bench story than a star story: First in and First Out? got 85.34 combined points from Herbert, Mahomes, and Taylor, and BearDown could not quite match that concentration.

The consequence is straightforward. Brian extends the winning streak to six games, and First in and First Out? makes it seven straight weeks above 150 in FoulknFootball.

Seasonal Depression (170.04) vs He hate me (163.22)

Jake gets just enough as Seasonal Depression slips past Dave.

Week 7 in FoulknFootball had the look of a matchup that would need nearly every useful number, and that is how it played out. Jake's Seasonal Depression beat Dave's He hate me, 170.04 to 163.22, in a game where both teams stayed comfortably above expectation and neither side had much room for waste. The margin was 6.82, and for Jake it came from surviving the quiet spots without letting them define the afternoon.

The hero was Daniel Jones. Indianapolis' quarterback gave Jake 22.22 points with 288 passing yards and two touchdowns against the Chargers, while D'Andre Swift added 19.8 for Chicago against New Orleans and both Josh Jacobs and Javonte Williams supplied 17.8. That support mattered because Seasonal Depression also absorbed 3.4 from Ashton Jeanty, 0.9 from AJ Barner, and a zero from Jameson Williams. We had the pick right last week with Seasonal Depression, but it was right team, wrong shape: the forecast called for 167.4–139.6, and Dave pushed this one deep into the 160s.

On the other side, Dave had the biggest single performance in the game. Matthew Stafford threw five touchdown passes for the Rams against Jacksonville and finished with 27.38, Davante Adams caught three of those scores on his way to 21.5, and Jaxon Smith-Njigba gave He hate me 18.3 with 123 yards and a touchdown for Seattle against Houston. Keenan Allen added 17.9 on 11 catches for 119 yards and a score. And yet, the backfield never gave Dave the same cover Jake found elsewhere. Alvin Kamara scored 2.9, TreVeyon Henderson 0.5, and Kyren Williams 6.5, and that left too much of the load on the receivers.

There was help available, though not enough to overturn the result cleanly. Dave left 15.7 coulda-shoulda points on the bench, compared with just 2.2 for Jake, and Minnesota's 3.0 on defense was part of that missed ground while Washington's starter finished at -1.0. Jake, by contrast, got almost everything he was going to get out of the lineup he set, which is often the quieter edge in a close game.

The consequence is a meaningful one near the top of FoulknFootball. Jake extends Seasonal Depression's run to seven straight weeks above 150, and in beating Dave head-to-head, he protects the ground he carried into Week 7 among the league's front-running teams as both owners look toward the middle stretch of the regular season.

Storylines

- Brian carries the league's six-game winning streak into Week 8, and that kind of run starts to put pressure on everyone else's path to the top seed.
- The line between fourth and fifth is still the most important traffic in FoulknFootball, with Dakota trying to hold the final projected playoff place and Michael close enough to change it quickly.
- Rob and Devin are both 2-5 now, so the bottom of the table is no longer just about this week's record but about avoiding a season that gets defined from underneath.
- Dave and Eric sit in the same crowded middle where one result can swing a team from playoff position to chase mode in a hurry.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	6-1-0	W6	1378.68	1194.46
2	Seasonal Depression	Jake	5-2-0	W2	1304.86	1168.18
3	He hate me	Dave	4-3-0	L1	1241.58	1217.80
4	BearDown	Dakota	3-4-0	L2	1204.42	1205.96
5	Disappointment	Michael	3-4-0	W1	1191.78	1188.18
6	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	3-4-0	W1	1180.34	1217.72
7	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	2-5-0	L1	1205.44	1389.72
8	Amon Another level	Devin	2-5-0	L2	1155.36	1280.44

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	97.4	187.95
2	—	Seasonal Depression	Jake	92.8	191.15
3	—	He hate me	Dave	84.3	167.23
4	—	BearDown	Dakota	83.3	183.59
5	▲ 1	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	83.1	188.71
6	▲ 2	Disappointment	Michael	82.6	182.19
7	▽ 2	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	79.8	174.45
8	▽ 1	Amon Another level	Devin	76.0	163.56

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W6), Seasonal Depression (W2). Cold spell: BearDown (L2), Amon Another level (L2).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 7 straight weeks.
- Seasonal Depression has scored 150+ in 7 straight weeks.
- He hate me has scored 150+ in 7 straight weeks.
- BearDown has scored 150+ in 6 straight weeks.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday has scored 150+ in 4 straight weeks.
- Unstoppable Farce has scored 150+ in 5 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	164.8 – 151.9	Lean	6-game win streak
Amon Another level vs Seasonal Depression	Seasonal Depression	160.6 – 138.4	Lock	150+ in 7 straight
Disappointment vs BearDown	BearDown	149.7 – 141.8	Lean	BearDown's 2-game skid ends
He hate me vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	146.2 – 144.1	Coin Flip	Upset call: 4 straight 150+

Predictions

- First in and First Out? will reach 160 points again and extend its winning streak to 7 games, keeping hold of the No. 1 seed.
- Seasonal Depression will win by 20 or more against Amon Another level , pushing its 150-plus streak to 8 straight weeks while Amon Another level drops a 3rd straight.
- BearDown will beat Disappointment by 7 to 15 points, ending its 2-game losing streak and staying in the projected 4-seed.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday will hand He hate me a loss despite the rankings gap, winning by 5 points or fewer and moving its 150-plus streak to 5 straight weeks.