

Week 8 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:34 UTC.

Stakes this week

- Hottest team in the league — First in and First Out? has won 7 straight — Brian hasn't lost in over a month and a half. Anyone drawing them is the underdog by default.

Intro

By the midpoint of the regular season, FoulknFootball asks for a more honest read. The standings have shape now, the scoring trends have held long enough to trust, and the path to Week 15 starts to narrow for teams still trying to climb back into the top four. Week 8 gave that picture some firmness. Eric posted the league's biggest number at 232.32 in Sanders Boutte on Sunday's win over Dave, while Brian kept First in and First Out? in first with a seventh straight victory. At this stage, those are not isolated Sundays. They are part of the table taking form.

The middle remains where the week felt most important. Devin's win over Jake tightened one lane, Michael's lower-scoring win over Dakota kept Disappointment in the playoff conversation, and Rob took another loss despite a score that would have been useful in many other matchups. That is the ebb and flow of this point in the season. The leaderboard still has room to move, but not as much as it did two weeks ago.

League Themes

The clearest story in FoulknFootball is still Brian. First in and First Out? has now won seven straight, and the season ledger adds another layer: eight straight weeks above 150. There is real staying power in that profile, even on a week when Eric owned the top score. Brian got 35.4 from Jonathan Taylor and 28.0 from the Tampa Bay defense, and the larger point is simple enough. The team in first is not visiting the top of the standings anymore; it lives there.

Eric gave the week its loudest number and the biggest upward confirmation. Sanders Boutte on Sunday jumped two spots in the power rankings to No. 3, then backed it up with 232.32 behind Breece Hall's 30.86 and another strong Sunday from a lineup that has now cleared 150 in five straight weeks. That climb started in last week's recap, and it looks more substantial now. When a team keeps producing at that level, the record begins to catch up to the scoring.

The biggest power-ranking move belonged to Rob, even in defeat. Unstoppable Farce rose three spots to No. 4, which tells you how much weekly scoring respect still exists around a 2-6 record. The season ledger supports it too: six straight weeks above 150. The standings say one thing, the scoring trend says another, and that tension is part of the story at the halfway mark.

On waivers, the best immediate return belonged to Eric. Troy Franklin gave Sanders Boutte on Sunday 20.9 points right away, the top output among this week's adds, and that is the kind of waiver hit that changes a matchup rather than decorating it. Devin's quarterback churn also paid off with Justin Fields at 20.86 and Mac Jones at 18.02, which is useful production from a position that had been uneven. There were no trades in Week 8, and that quiet fits the moment; most of FoulknFootball still seems to be judging whether a push should come through waivers or patience.

A few player lines landed with enough force to matter beyond one box score. Saquon Barkley's 29.4 on a 9.8-point projection gave Devin a major lift, and Breece Hall's 30.9 on an 8.9-point projection did even more for Eric. Tucker Kraft smashing his 7.7 projection with 26.3 was another sharp swing. On the other side, Bijan Robinson's 2.8 against a 20.1 projection, Dak Prescott's 6.6 against 26.2, and Christian McCaffrey's 6.8 against 22.3 all left real dents. At this point of the season, the outliers do more than swing one result. They start shaping who can absorb a bad Sunday and who cannot.

Game by Game

First in and First Out? (203.84) vs Unstoppable Farce (189.84)

Brian's stars hold the line as First in and First Out? turns back Rob.

Week 8 in FoulknFootball had the feel of a game that would need real offense on both sides, and it delivered that from the start. Brian's First in and First Out? beat Rob's Unstoppable Farce, 203.84 to 189.84, in one of the league's stronger scoring games of the week. The hero was Jonathan Taylor. Indianapolis' back gave Brian 35.4 points against Tennessee, with 153 rushing yards, 21 receiving yards, and three total touchdowns.

The call last week to ride First in and First Out? held up, but it was right team, wrong shape. The forecast said 164.8 to 151.9; the reality came in nearly 40 points higher on both sides, which tells you this was less about caution and more about who could survive the ebb and flow. Brian did that with front-line production. Justin Herbert gave him 25.28 for the Chargers against Minnesota, Patrick Mahomes added 22.96 for Kansas City against Washington, and the Tampa Bay defense supplied 28.0.

And yet, what made Brian's night stand out was not perfection. Bijan Robinson finished with 2.8, Quinshon Judkins had 1.7, and both Jerry Jeudy and Marquise Brown gave him 0.0. On the other side, Rob put up the kind of score that wins most weeks. Jalen Hurts scored 25.36 for Philadelphia against the Giants, Bo Nix added 23.78 for Denver against Dallas, Derrick Henry gave Baltimore 19.1 with two rushing touchdowns against Chicago, and Kimani Vidal added 18.7 for the Chargers.

Meanwhile, Rob had a few spots that never quite came along for the full ride. Aaron Jones scored 3.0, Mark Andrews had 3.4, Jacory Croskey-Merritt finished at 2.5, and Eddy Pineiro added just 1.0. That was the narrow difference in a 14-point game. Unstoppable Farce had enough top-end scoring to stay in range all day, but First in and First Out? got the sharper lift from its difference-makers, and Taylor's 35.4 was the cleanest number on the board.

The consequence is clear at the top of FoulknFootball. Brian extends the winning streak to seven games, and First in and First Out? makes it eight straight weeks above 150.

Sanders Boutte on Sunday (232.32) vs He hate me (148.64)

Eric's big Sunday carries Sanders Boutte on Sunday past Dave.

Week 8 in FoulknFootball had the look of a close call on paper. It did not stay there for long. Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday handled Dave's He hate me, 232.32 to 148.64, and the margin came from a roster that kept finding points even through the ordinary ebb and flow of a long fantasy weekend.

The hero was Breece Hall. The Jets back gave Eric 30.86 points against Cincinnati, rushing 18 times for 133 yards and two touchdowns, and he even added a passing score. Tucker Kraft was just behind him with 26.3 for Green Bay against Pittsburgh on seven catches, 143 yards, and two touchdowns, while Chase Brown supplied 22.5 for Cincinnati and C.J. Stroud added 21.72 for Houston. Buffalo's defense chipped in 19.0, Chase McLaughlin added 17.0, and that is how a lineup gets to 232.32 even with Christian McCaffrey held to 6.8 and the Bengals defense finishing at -4.0.

On the other side, Dave had one player who gave this matchup some real weight. James Cook was excellent for Buffalo against Carolina, posting 33.6 points on 216 rushing yards and two touchdowns, while Josh Allen added 23.22 and Rashee Rice gave Kansas City 16.5. And yet, too many other spots stayed quiet at the same time. Drake London finished at 0.0, Matthew Golden at 0.4, Emeka Egbuka at 3.5, Cade Otton at 4.0, Alvin Kamara at 4.5, and that left He hate me needing one more strong wave that never quite arrived.

One sharp detail tells the story. Eric got 30.86 from Hall, 26.3 from Kraft, 22.5 from Chase Brown, 21.72 from Stroud, 19.0 from the Bills defense, 17.0 from McLaughlin, and 16.74 from Tyler Huntley; Dave got the best score in the game from Cook, but not the same breadth behind it.

The consequence is a meaningful one in the middle of the league table. After entering Week 7 at 3-4 and outside the top half, Eric now has a second straight win and extends Sanders Boutte on Sunday's 150-plus streak to five consecutive weeks, while handing Dave a second straight loss after He hate me had opened 4-2.

Amon Another level (187.78) vs Seasonal Depression (156.22)

Devin turns the Week 7 script around, and Amon Another level clears Jake 187.78–156.22.

Week 8 in FoulknFootball opened with a familiar expectation and ended with a different result. Jake came in off seven straight weeks above 150 and carrying the earlier edge in this matchup, but Devin's Amon Another level had the stronger card this time, beating Seasonal Depression 187.78 to 156.22. The hero was Saquon Barkley. Philadelphia's back did the heaviest lifting with 29.4 points against the Giants, built on 150 rushing yards, 24 receiving yards, and two touchdowns.

The call last week was for Jake again, and we missed it cleanly. Seasonal Depression was the right pick in the forecast at 160.6–138.4, but Week 8 went the other way because Devin's top-end production landed first and stayed there; Barkley was the clearest swing, and Dallas Goedert's two-touchdown day for Philadelphia added 14.8 more. Justin Fields gave Devin 20.86 for Kansas City, Jaxson Dart added 19.42 for the Giants, and the Cleveland defense chipped in 11.0. That was enough structure to carry the quieter parts of the lineup.

On the other side, Jake still posted a number that usually keeps a team in the game. Daniel Jones was sharp for Indianapolis against Tennessee, finishing with 23.18 points on 272 yards and three touchdowns, while Javonte Williams scored twice for Dallas and gave Seasonal Depression 16.9. Michael Pittman added 15.5, Khalil Shakir brought 14.8 for Buffalo, and both kickers were useful with Ka'imi Fairbairn at 14.0 and Cameron Dicker at 13.0. And yet, the ebb and flow of this matchup changed at the second quarterback slot, where Spencer Rattler's 2.64 left Jake chasing too much ground.

There were other misses that narrowed Jake's path. Quentin Johnston gave Seasonal Depression a zero, Kenneth Gainwell finished at 1.5, Marvin Mims had 1.8, and Theo Johnson managed 2.0. Devin had lighter spots too — Chris Olave scored 6.0, Justin Jefferson 7.4, and Tony Pollard 5.3 — but Amon Another level got enough useful numbers across the board, and one sharp difference told the story: Devin's best players arrived in clusters, while Jake's stronger pieces were forced to cover isolated holes.

The consequence is straightforward and important. Jake's streak of seven straight weeks above 150 extends to eight even in defeat, but Devin stops Amon Another level's two-game slide with a result that answers the Week 7 loss to Seasonal Depression head-to-head.

Disappointment (115.36) vs BearDown (103.52)

Michael and Disappointment do enough, and BearDown's misses add up.

Week 8 in FoulknFootball had the look of a game BearDown could steady, but the afternoon settled in Michael's direction. Disappointment beat Dakota's BearDown, 115.36 to 103.52, and in a matchup where neither side came close to projection, the cleaner quarterback number made the difference. The hero was Drake Maye. New England's rookie gave Michael 26.28 points against Cleveland, throwing for 282 yards and three touchdowns while adding 50 rushing yards.

That mattered because Disappointment was carrying plenty of lighter spots. Baker Mayfield managed just 4.08 for Tampa Bay against New Orleans, Jake Ferguson gave Michael a zero at tight end for Dallas against Denver, and several receivers stayed modest. And yet, there was enough cover elsewhere: Tyler Loop added 12.0, Tee Higgins scored 10.4 on a touchdown catch for Cincinnati against the Jets, and Philadelphia's defense chipped in 6.0. Sometimes the ebb and flow of a fantasy matchup comes down to one position holding its ground, and Michael got that from Maye.

On the other side, Dakota had strong work from the specialists and one reliable star. Chris Boswell was excellent for Pittsburgh with 19.0, Travis Kelce gave Kansas City 15.9 on six catches for 99 yards and a score against Washington, and the Patriots defense added 11.0. Meanwhile, BearDown never found enough lift from the quarterbacks. Caleb Williams scored 11.8 for Chicago against Baltimore, Dak Prescott finished at 6.62 for Dallas against Denver, and that left too much pressure on a wideout group where Ja'Marr Chase's 9.1 was the top return.

There was bench help available for both teams, which tells you this was not a perfect card on either side. Michael left 24.32 from Joe Flacco and 10.3 from George Kittle unused, while Dakota had 9.9 from Josh Downs and 9.7 from David Njoku on the bench. The sharper point is simpler: Disappointment survived its busts because one quarterback gave Michael a real advantage, while BearDown absorbed too many quiet numbers at once, including 0.0 from Brian Robinson, 0.6 from Jordan Mason, and -3.0 from the Steelers defense.

The consequence is a clear one in the middle of the FoulknFootball table. Michael came in one spot behind Dakota in last week's standings, and this result gives Disappointment the head-to-head push it needed while extending BearDown's losing streak to three games.

Storylines

- Brian's seven-game run now meets a dangerous spot, because He hate me is still projected on the playoff line and a win there would say more than another routine hold of first place.
- The fourth-place race is the one to watch, with Michael and Devin close enough that one more result could push Disappointment in or pull Amon Another level fully into the bubble.
- Rob's record has little margin left, but the scoring profile is still stronger than the place in the standings, which makes Week 9 feel like a test of whether that gap can keep existing.
- Dakota has dropped three straight, and with the lower half tightening, another loss would make the climb back toward the top four much steeper.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	7-1-0	W7	1582.52	1384.30
2	Seasonal Depression	Jake	5-3-0	L1	1461.08	1355.96
3	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	4-4-0	W2	1412.66	1366.36
4	He hate me	Dave	4-4-0	L2	1390.22	1450.12
5	Disappointment	Michael	4-4-0	W2	1307.14	1291.70
6	Amon Another level	Devin	3-5-0	W1	1343.14	1436.66
7	BearDown	Dakota	3-5-0	L3	1307.94	1321.32
8	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	2-6-0	L2	1395.28	1593.56

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	97.3	189.41
2	—	Seasonal Depression	Jake	87.5	177.51
3	▲ 2	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	86.6	194.82
4	▲ 3	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	80.3	182.24
5	▽ 2	He hate me	Dave	80.0	157.33
6	—	Disappointment	Michael	79.0	169.28
7	▲ 1	Amon Another level	Devin	77.3	162.05
8	▽ 4	BearDown	Dakota	74.9	154.53

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W7), Sanders Boutte on Sunday (W2), Disappointment (W2). Cold spell: BearDown (L3), He hate me (L2), Unstoppable Farce (L2).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 8 straight weeks.
- Seasonal Depression has scored 150+ in 8 straight weeks.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday has scored 150+ in 5 straight weeks.
- Unstoppable Farce has scored 150+ in 6 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	171.8 – 154.6	Lean	Five straight 150+ weeks
Amon Another level vs Disappointment	Disappointment	138.9 – 127.4	Lean	Two-game win streak
Seasonal Depression vs BearDown	Seasonal Depression	164.7 – 128.8	Lock	Eight straight 150+ weeks
He hate me vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	176.2 – 166.1	Lean	Seven straight wins

Predictions

- First in and First Out? will push its winning streak to 8 and its run of 150+ points to 9 straight weeks with a win over He hate me by at least 10 points.
- Seasonal Depression will stay in the No. 2 spot, score at least 160, and hand BearDown a fourth straight loss.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday will reach 165+ for a sixth consecutive 150+ week, and Unstoppable Farce will fall to 2-7 despite clearing 150 again.
- Disappointment will win by between 8 and 15 points, extend its streak to 3 straight wins, and remain ahead of Amon Another level in the playoff chase.