

Week 11 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:38 UTC.

Intro

By Week 11, FoulknFootball has a settled look on paper and a restless feel underneath. The deadline has passed, the rosters are largely what they are, and with five weeks left in the regular season the separation now comes from surviving a few bad slots without letting the whole card go with them. That is where this part of the year gets honest. Depth matters. Start/sit calls matter. A team can play well and still leave Sunday needing one more answer.

The clearest example was the highest-scoring game on the board. Dave's He hate me put up 209.70 against Michael's 186.56, a number strong enough to command the week and timely enough to push Dave up to first in the power rankings. Brian still holds first place in the standings at 9-2, and his run of 150 or more reached 11 straight weeks even in a narrower, more workmanlike win. Just beneath him, the middle remains crowded. Four teams are between 5-6 and 6-5, and the line between fourth place and sixth is now thin enough that one uneven Sunday can move the whole picture.

League Themes

Dave supplied the standard for Week 11, and He hate me earned it with the league's top score at 209.70. Josh Allen led the week's individual board with 42.68, TreVeyon Henderson added 27.3, and that recent surge is no longer just a one-week flash. He hate me is now the top team in the power rankings after climbing one spot, and the last three weeks tell the story cleanly: 217.62 points per game over that stretch, well above an already strong season baseline. In a week that felt worn down across the league, Dave had the lineup that still looked fresh.

Brian remains the steadier season-long marker. First in and First Out? moved to 9-2, kept control of first place, and extended the league's most reliable scoring note with an 11th straight game above 150. That consistency matters even more now because the field behind him is still shifting. Michael was one of the week's notable movers, up two spots to fifth in the power rankings despite the loss, and that rise fits the broader read on Disappointment: the record is 5-6, but the recent scoring has been strong enough to keep Michael squarely in the middle race.

The best waiver return belonged to Jake. Michael Wilson gave Seasonal Depression 18.5 points right away, the strongest immediate production among this week's adds, and in a lower-scoring loss that kind of pickup at least kept part of the lineup upright. Elsewhere on waivers, Devin got 11.04 from Jameis Winston, while several other additions were quieter and felt more like roster maintenance than instant help. That is often the shape of November in FoulknFootball. The move can be sound, and the payoff can still be modest.

The week's only trade brought the sharper long-view question. Rob sent a future second-round pick package the other way and Devin received De'Von Achane, who delivered 16.5 points in his first week for Amon Another level. That does not settle the trade, but it does give Devin an immediate usable piece at a point in the season when there is very little time left for patience. Rob, meanwhile, keeps trying to thread a difficult path from 4-7, and that is a fair reflection of the standings around the bottom half where every decision now carries two clocks: this season's chase and next season's setup.

The stat lines were full of the hard swings that define this stage of the year. Bryce Young smashed an 8.4-point projection with 31.82 for Devin, Sean Tucker turned a 6.1 expectation into 32.0 for Michael, Bijan Robinson beat 9.1 with 26.3 for Brian, and Tetairoa McMillan jumped from 6.0 to 25.0. On the other side, Justin Herbert's 3.3 against a 23.9 projection was one of the week's harshest misses, while Lamar Jackson fell to 4.7 against 20.0, Ja'Marr Chase managed 3.0 against 14.4, and Breece Hall posted 6.4 against 15.1. Seasonal Depression's 125.86 was the week's low score, and one sharp detail explained a good share of it: Jake got only 6.0 from J.J. McCarthy against a 14.7 projection, another example of how the grind can turn one soft spot into a whole afternoon.

Eric's loss deserves a note as well, because Sanders Boutte on Sunday still cleared 150 for an eighth straight week and yet came away empty in the narrowest game of the slate. Dakota's BearDown won 179.24 to 177.22, which keeps the bubble and the lower half of the standings tightly packed. The unpredictable nature of fantasy football shows up most clearly here. A team can sustain a long scoring standard, do enough again, and still watch the week slip on a two-point margin.

Game by Game

He hate me (209.70) vs Disappointment (186.56)

Dave gets the better of Michael as He hate me stays hot.

Week 11 in FoulknFootball had the look of another big-number afternoon for Dave, and He hate me delivered again in a 209.70-186.56 win over Michael's Disappointment. The margin was 23.14, but the score reads closer to the truth than the shape of the day: both teams had enough offense to win elsewhere, and Dave simply found the stronger answers at the top of the card.

The hero was Josh Allen. Buffalo's quarterback carried He hate me with 42.68 points against Tampa Bay, throwing for 317 yards and three touchdowns while adding 40 rushing yards and three more scores on the ground. He had help, too. TreVeyon Henderson gave Dave 27.3 for New England against the Jets, Tetairoa McMillan added 25.0 for Carolina against Atlanta, and James Cook chipped in 17.4 in the same Buffalo game that fueled Allen. And yet, the sharp detail here is that Dave reached 209.70 while getting only 4.72 from Lamar Jackson and 1.1 from Isaiah Davis. That is usually how a week gets out of reach.

On the other side, Michael hardly gave this away. Sean Tucker was excellent for Tampa Bay against Buffalo, posting 32.0 points on 106 rushing yards, 34 receiving yards, and three total touchdowns. George Kittle added 18.7 for San Francisco against Arizona, Kenneth Walker brought 17.1, Baker Mayfield scored 16.82, and Jahmyr Gibbs supplied 14.6 for Detroit against Philadelphia. But Disappointment took too many light returns at wide receiver, where Ricky Pearsall finished at 0.0, DJ Moore at 2.1, and both A.J. Brown and DK Metcalf at 4.9.

There was bench help available for Michael, with Bhayshul Tuten's 13.4 and Tyler Loop's 11.0 left unused, though not enough to swing a game of this size. Dave, meanwhile, left only modest quarterback alternatives behind Josh Allen, and that matters because it keeps the focus where it belongs: on the starters He hate me trusted and the numbers they produced. It was a clean reminder of the unpredictable nature of fantasy football, because Dave absorbed one major miss from Jackson and still posted the best score in this matchup by a comfortable margin.

The consequence is straightforward. After losing a 199.52-193.38 game to Rob in Week 10, Dave answers with 209.70 here, and He hate me's surge in the middle of the regular-season race continues with a second straight week above 190.

BearDown (179.24) vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday (177.22)

Dakota gets just enough, and BearDown slips past Eric.

Week 11 in FoulknFootball had the feel of a game that would need everything on both sides, and that is exactly what it became. Dakota's BearDown edged Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday, 179.24 to 177.22, a two-point result built on volume, a few well-timed spikes, and one defense that changed the texture of the afternoon. The hero was Dak Prescott. Dallas' quarterback threw for 268 yards and four touchdowns against Las Vegas, giving BearDown 24.32 in a game that never offered much room for error.

We picked Eric coming in, and that miss is ours directly. The forecast leaned on BearDown's five-game slide and projected a comfortable Sanders Boutte on Sunday win at 154.9 to 121.3; what we missed was that Dakota's lineup had enough cover for quiet games from Caleb Williams, Ja'Marr Chase, and David Njoku, while Pittsburgh's defense supplied 22.0 and kept BearDown afloat. That is the unpredictable nature of fantasy football, and sometimes one slot tells the larger story better than a full page of explanation.

Dakota had support everywhere it was needed. George Pickens, also from Dallas, brought 20.4 on nine catches for 144 yards and a touchdown, Xavier Legette added 14.3 for Carolina against Atlanta, Tyrone Tracy gave the Giants 13.9 against Green Bay, and Deebo Samuel chipped in 13.7. And yet, BearDown also survived real misses. Chase finished with 3.0 for Cincinnati against Pittsburgh, Brian Robinson had 2.4 for Atlanta against Arizona, and Njoku managed 0.7.

On the other side, Eric put up a number that wins most weeks. Christian McCaffrey was the headline piece with 30.1 for San Francisco against Arizona, Trey McBride added 17.5 for the Cardinals, Jason Myers delivered 15.0 for Seattle, Marcus Mariota gave Washington 15.42, and CeeDee Lamb scored 12.6 in the same Dallas passing game that carried Dakota. But Sanders Boutte on Sunday took just a little too much light scoring from Breece Hall's 6.4, Nick Chubb's 1.7, and Rashid Shaheed's 2.9, and in a game this tight those were not small details.

The result is a clear one for Dakota. BearDown's five-game losing streak, the one hanging over last week's forecast, is over.

First in and First Out? (163.48) vs Amon Another level (141.86)

Brian stays clear at the top as Bijan Robinson carries First in and First Out? past Devin.

There was a familiar shape to this one in FoulknFootball. Brian's First in and First Out? again cleared 150, and this time it came in a 163.48-141.86 win over Devin's Amon Another level. The margin was 21.62, comfortable enough on the page, though the path there had a few turns that fit the unpredictable nature of fantasy football.

The hero was Bijan Robinson. Atlanta's back gave Brian 26.3 points against Carolina, rushing 23 times for 104 yards and two touchdowns while adding four catches for 39 yards. Travis Etienne added 19.3 for New Orleans against the Chargers, Derrick Henry brought 18.2 for Baltimore against Cleveland, and Nico Collins supplied 15.2 for Houston against Tennessee. That was the spine of Brian's afternoon, and it mattered because First in and First Out? did not get much help from Justin Herbert's 3.34 or Patrick Mahomes' 13.34.

On the other side, Devin got the biggest single number in the game from Bryce Young. Carolina's quarterback threw for 448 yards and three touchdowns against Atlanta, good for 31.82 points, while Justin Fields added 19.34 and De'Von Achane gave Miami 16.5 against Washington. And yet, Devin's wide receiver group never really found the second wave. Stefon Diggs scored 10.5, but Justin Jefferson finished at 6.1, Amon-Ra St. Brown at 4.2, Cooper Kupp at 2.3, and DeVonta Smith at 0.8.

One sharp detail decided the rest. Brian got 12.0 from the Jacksonville defense and 10.0 from Jake Elliott, while Devin took a 0.0 from Brandon McManus and a -1.0 from the Arizona defense. In a matchup where both teams still beat projection, that special-teams and defense gap gave First in and First Out? the breathing room it needed.

The consequence is clear and specific. Brian extends First in and First Out?'s streak to 11 straight games above 150, a run that keeps him where he was a week ago: first place in FoulknFootball.

Unstoppable Farce (139.20) vs Seasonal Depression (125.86)

Wil Lutz steadies Unstoppable Farce, and Rob turns back Jake.

Week 11 in FoulknFootball had the look of a game that would be decided in the margins, and that is exactly where Rob found it. Unstoppable Farce beat Jake's Seasonal Depression 139.20 to 125.86, a measured win built less on one overwhelming star than on a few timely numbers that held their shape while other spots around the matchup gave way. The hero was Wil Lutz, and Denver's kicker supplied 18.0 points against Kansas City, the best single total in Rob's lineup.

Rob did not get a clean afternoon from his marquee positions. Bo Nix finished with 12.6 for Denver, Jalen Hurts gave Philadelphia 14.5 against Detroit, and several flex spots stayed quiet, with Tez Johnson at 0.6, Ladd McConkey at 1.3, and Kimani Vidal at 1.2. And yet, Unstoppable Farce kept finding enough adult production around that. Devin Singletary scored 16.7 for the Giants with two rushing touchdowns against Green Bay, Kareem Hunt added 12.2 against Denver, Houston's defense chipped in 10.0, and Eddy Pineiro's 9.0 gave Rob another useful push. We missed this one coming in. The call was Seasonal Depression, 145.8-139.6, and the streak we cited for Jake never helped because the quarterback room gave him too little to work with.

On the other side, Jake had the best receiver in the game. Arizona's Michael Wilson turned 18 targets into 15 catches and 185 yards for 18.5 points against San Francisco, while Jameson Williams added 15.7 for Detroit and Jordan Addison found the end zone for Minnesota. But the center of the lineup never really settled. Sam Darnold's 4.26 for Seattle came with four interceptions, J.J. McCarthy managed 6.0 for the Vikings, Josh Jacobs scored 4.0 for Green Bay, Ashton Jeanty had 3.4 for Las Vegas, and Khalil Shakir slipped to -0.3 for Buffalo.

That is usually how the unpredictable nature of fantasy football shows up in November. Rob survived five starters at 4.1 points or fewer and still won by 13.34, because his kickers, defenses, and touchdown help from Singletary and Hunt gave Unstoppable Farce a sturdier floor than Jake's lineup could match. Meanwhile, Jake left some meaningful points on the bench, including Brock Purdy's 19.3 and Kenneth Gainwell's 22.5, but this result was settled first by the starters he did trust and the quarterback shortfall they could not cover.

The consequence is a clear one. Rob makes it back-to-back wins after ending that three-game slide last week, while Jake's run of 150-point games stops at 10 straight.

Storylines

- The race for the No. 4 seed is the week's cleanest pressure point, with Eric and Michael entering from the same 5-6 line and only one of them currently inside the projected bracket.
- Brian's 11-game run above 150 faces its sternest immediate test against Jake, who has slid to third and needs a response to keep the top two from pulling away.

- Rob and Devin sit at 4-7 and 5-6 with very little margin left, so next week reads like an elimination game in everything but name.
- Dave has moved past Brian to No. 1 in the power rankings; if He hate me posts another big number, the standings may be the next thing to change.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	9-2-0	W2	2105.44	1928.84
2	He hate me	Dave	6-5-0	W1	2043.08	2002.40
3	Seasonal Depression	Jake	6-5-0	L2	1934.94	1842.28
4	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	5-6-0	L2	1905.86	1878.76
5	Disappointment	Michael	5-6-0	L1	1836.06	1826.94
6	Amon Another level	Devin	5-6-0	L1	1800.86	1870.18
7	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	4-7-0	W2	1873.92	2075.88
8	BearDown	Dakota	4-7-0	W1	1761.98	1836.86

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	▲ 1	He hate me	Dave	91.6	217.62
2	▽ 1	First in and First Out?	Brian	91.3	174.31
3	—	Seasonal Depression	Jake	80.5	157.95
4	—	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	79.3	164.40
5	▲ 2	Disappointment	Michael	79.1	176.31
6	▽ 1	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	76.4	159.55
7	▽ 1	Amon Another level	Devin	74.9	152.57
8	—	BearDown	Dakota	72.3	151.35

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W2), Unstoppable Farce (W2). Cold spell: Seasonal Depression (L2), Sanders Boutte on Sunday (L2). Trending up: He hate me (last 3 avg 217.6 vs season 185.7, +17%).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 11 straight weeks.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday has scored 150+ in 8 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs Amon Another level	Amon Another level	117.6 – 113.2	Coin Flip	Unstoppable Farce two-game win streak
Disappointment vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Disappointment	154.8 – 145.1	Lean	Sanders Boutte on Sunday two-game skid
Seasonal Depression vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	166.3 – 136.8	Lock	150+ in 11 straight weeks
He hate me vs BearDown	He hate me	181.4 – 123.7	Lock	He hate me up 17.2% lately

Predictions

- Amon Another level will beat Unstoppable Farce by 5 points or fewer, ending Rob's 2-game winning streak and keeping that race in the middle of the standings just as tight.
- Disappointment will score at least 150 points and hand Sanders Boutte on Sunday a third straight loss, a notable turn with Michael sitting 5th in the current power rankings and Eric 4th.
- First in and First Out? will reach 160 points again and extend its 150-plus streak to 12 weeks, while Seasonal Depression drops a third consecutive game.
- He hate me will win by at least 45 points and stay on top of the power rankings, pushing its recent 17.2% scoring surge into another week.
- By the end of Week 12, the projected top four will include First in and First Out?, He hate me, Seasonal Depression, and Disappointment, with Disappointment moving ahead of Sanders Boutte on Sunday in the playoff picture.