

Week 14 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:42 UTC.

Stakes this week

- Bubble watch — Amon Another level (#7) vs Seasonal Depression (#4) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- Bubble watch — Disappointment (#3) vs BearDown (#8) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- Bubble watch — He hate me (#2) vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday (#5) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- First in and First Out? on a 5-game win streak — Brian's squad has been rolling — next opponent has to break the streak.
- He hate me on a 4-game win streak — Dave's squad has been rolling — next opponent has to break the streak.
- Seasonal Depression on a 5-game losing streak — Jake's squad needs a win to stop the bleeding.

Intro

One week remains in the FoulknFootball regular season, and the bracket line feels tighter than the records alone suggest. Brian remains the steady point at the top after another authoritative win, Dave stayed right with him, and the teams around the No. 4 spot spent Week 14 learning the same lesson: win and the path stays clear, lose and the arithmetic starts asking for help.

The highest-scoring game of the week carried that mood all the way through. Dave's 197.70-191.86 win over Jake was a high-stakes battle in every sense, close enough to matter on each late-window update and large enough to leave a mark on the league picture. Jake did more than enough to win in most weeks, but that is the sharper point now. In FoulknFootball, "enough" has become a dangerous word in December.

League Themes

The dominant storyline sits with the teams that keep making big numbers feel routine. Brian has now won five straight, and First in and First Out? has scored 150 or more in all 14 weeks, which is the kind of season-long floor that keeps first place from drifting. Dave is not far behind in weekly force. He hate me posted the league's top score at 197.70, extended its own winning streak to four, and made Josh Allen's 37.84 the biggest individual number on the board. That pairing at the top has held for another week because both teams continue to remove volatility from the conversation.

The narrowest margin belonged to that same game, and it is worth lingering there for a moment. Dave got the headline total from Allen, but Jake answered with two of the week's best receiver lines as Puka Nacua scored 28.7 and Michael Wilson added 26.2. That is why the result matters beyond one entry in the standings. Seasonal Depression is on a five-game slide, yet the scoring profile is still dangerous enough to make every team around the bubble pay attention.

Michael made one of the cleaner statements below the top two. Disappointment climbed another step in the power rankings, up one spot to No. 3, and Jahmyr Gibbs' 30.0 helped drive a 171.72-point win over Rob. The broader arc matters here too: Disappointment has now scored 150 or more in six straight weeks. That is not a soft patch of schedule. That is a team finding a reliable weekly shape at the right point of the calendar.

The most useful waiver move came from Eric, even in a loss. Shedeur Sanders produced 33.46 points, the best immediate return from this week's pickups, and that kind of hit usually changes a matchup by itself. Rob also found live help on waivers with Jaylen Wright at 16.7 and Mike Gesicki at 14.6, proof that Unstoppable Farce is still getting actionable production from roster churn even when the result goes the wrong way. There were no trades, which fits the league at this stage; most of the movement is happening around the edges, not through roster-overhaul deals.

A few stat lines bent the week in obvious ways. Jalen Hurts gave just 0.4 against an 18.4 projection, Jayden Daniels managed 2.7 against 17.9, and Patrick Mahomes finished at 5.3 against 17.6. On the other side, Blake Corum's 25.1 against a 5.7 projection was one of the week's true swings, and it helped keep Eric competitive despite the loss. The other clear trend belongs to Dakota. BearDown has now lost three straight, and the last-three scoring average continues to sit well below the season rate. At this point, that is no longer a blip. It is the season speaking plainly.

Game by Game

He hate me (197.70) vs Seasonal Depression (191.86) — Old Guard vs Young Guns

Old Guard vs Young Guns: Dave holds off Jake in a Week 14 high-stakes battle.

With a playoff seed on the line in FoulknFootball, the generational framing fit the afternoon, but the score did the real talking. Dave's He hate me edged Jake's Seasonal Depression, 197.70 to 191.86, a margin of 5.84 in one of the league's heaviest totals of the week. It was not a clean card for either side. It was a deep one.

Dave's hero was Josh Allen, and Buffalo's quarterback gave him the kind of number that steadies an entire lineup: 37.84 points, with 251 passing yards, three passing touchdowns, and 78 more on the ground with a rushing score. Jaxon Smith-Njigba added 21.1 for Seattle against Atlanta, Harold Fannin brought 17.4 for Cleveland against Tennessee, and Dave also got useful work from Kyren Williams and RJ Harvey, who combined for 31.7. We had the call on He hate me last week, and that much held up; the projection was 154.3-126.7, so this was right team, wrong shape.

On the other side, Jake came with enough offense to win most weeks, and for long stretches it looked like the younger side might simply outrun the miss at quarterback. Puka Nacua was excellent for the Rams against Arizona, finishing with 28.7 on seven catches for 167 yards and two touchdowns, while Michael Wilson answered with 26.2 for Arizona on 11 catches, 142 yards, and two scores. Sam Darnold added 22.26 for Seattle, Cameron Dicker delivered 18.0, and Josh Jacobs gave Green Bay 15.2. And yet, Daniel Jones' 0.8 for Indianapolis against Jacksonville sat there all day, and in a game decided by 5.84, that was the sharp detail.

Dave had his own quiet spots. Davante Adams scored 2.9, Rashee Rice had 3.4, Emeka Egbuka finished with 1.5, and Matthew Golden gave him 0.0. But He hate me still got home because the spine of the lineup held: Allen at the top, the Minnesota defense with 19.0, and enough support from Bowers, Williams, Harvey, and the kicking pair of Zane Gonzalez and Harrison Butker. That is often how these late-season games are won. Not with perfection, but with coverage.

The consequence is immediate and specific. Dave extends He hate me's 150-point run to six straight weeks, while Jake's slide reaches five consecutive losses at exactly the point in the regular season when the top four matter most.

Disappointment (171.72) vs Unstoppable Farce (148.38)

Michael's Disappointment has enough range to turn back Rob's Unstoppable Farce.

Week 14 in FoulknFootball had real weight around the middle of the table, and Michael answered it with a 171.72-148.38 win over Rob. Disappointment did not build this on one clean, spotless card. It came from surviving a few rough returns and still finding more than enough scoring at the top, which is often how these December matchups are won.

The hero was Jahmyr Gibbs. Detroit's back gave Michael 30.0 points against Dallas with three rushing touchdowns, and Brandon Aubrey added 22.0 from the kicking spot for the Cowboys against the Lions. Tee Higgins supplied 21.2 for Cincinnati against Buffalo, DK Metcalf brought 14.8 for Pittsburgh against Baltimore, and the Philadelphia defense chipped in 15.0. Our call to ride Disappointment held up, but it was right team, wrong shape — the forecast saw 148.6-121.9, and the game arrived with both teams well above that.

On the other side, Rob had enough offense to win plenty of weeks. Christian Watson scored 20.9 for Green Bay against Chicago on two touchdown catches, the Seattle defense posted 20.0, and Bo Nix gave Unstoppable Farce 15.98 for Denver against Las Vegas. Woody Marks added 13.6 for Houston, while Kyle Pitts and Colston Loveland combined for 17.9 at tight end. And yet, the sharp detail sits at quarterback, where Jalen Hurts' 0.4-point afternoon for Philadelphia against the Chargers left Rob chasing points that never quite came back.

Michael had his own misses. Tyrod Taylor finished at -1.76, Bhayshul Tuten at -1.5, DJ Moore at -0.4, and Kenneth Walker at 2.8. But Disappointment covered those spots because the spine of the lineup held firm, and one strong cluster can carry a week when the other side takes its hit at a premium position.

The consequence is a clear one from last week's ledger: Michael ends Rob's four-game winning streak, and after entering Week 13 one place behind Unstoppable Farce in the standings, Disappointment now has the result it needed in that crowded playoff race.

Amon Another level (157.44) vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday (139.84) — Cousin vs Nephew Cousin vs Nephew: Devin keeps Amon Another level alive.

In a high-stakes battle with playoff seeding in view, Devin's Amon Another level beat Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday, 157.44 to 139.84, and did it with enough range to survive a few quiet spots. That is the first thing to note here. Devin won comfortably enough despite just 2.48 from Kirk Cousins of Las Vegas, 3.0 from Chris Olave of New Orleans, and 1.1 from Justin Jefferson of Minnesota. The hero was Joe Burrow, who gave Cincinnati 23.36 points against Buffalo on 284 passing yards and four touchdowns.

The rest of Devin's card had the steady look of a team finding points in the right pockets. Saquon Barkley ran for 122 yards and a touchdown for Philadelphia against the Chargers and scored 18.2, De'Von Achane added 16.5 for Miami against the Jets, and David Montgomery brought 13.3 for Houston against Dallas. Meanwhile, the two defenses did real work. Miami scored 17.0, the Chargers added 14.0, and that kind of base matters when some of the premium receivers stay quiet.

On the other side, Eric had the best single skill-position number in the game. Blake Corum gave the Rams 25.1 points against Arizona with 128 rushing yards and two touchdowns, while Chase Brown added 15.5 for Cincinnati and CeeDee Lamb supplied 12.1 for Dallas. And yet, the quarterback line left too much behind. Jayden Daniels scored 2.72 for Washington against Minnesota, and Sanders Boutte on Sunday absorbed too many smaller misses as Troy Franklin finished with 1.1, Darren Waller with 1.7, Nick Chubb with 0.3, and Breece Hall with 4.3.

One sharp detail says most of what needs saying. Devin left Tony Pollard's 28.1 on the bench and still won by 17.60, which tells you Amon Another level had enough substance in the lineup even without a perfect start-sit week.

The consequence is a meaningful one in FoulknFootball's regular-season race. Devin snaps Amon Another level's three-game losing streak from Week 13, and after last week's forecast leaned Eric's way, this result keeps the bubble picture moving with one week left before the playoffs begin in Week 16.

First in and First Out? (176.86) vs BearDown (79.68)

Brian's depth delivers a decisive victory over Dakota.

Week 14 in FoulknFootball had a familiar look at the top of the board, and Brian's First in and First Out? kept it that way. The 176.86-79.68 result over Dakota's BearDown was not built on one overwhelming star turn so much as steady control across the lineup, and that usually tells you more about a roster than one isolated spike. Travis Etienne led the scoring with 20.2 points for New Orleans against Indianapolis, while Jake Elliott added 15.0, Jake Bates supplied 14.0, and Bucky Irving brought 14.1 for Tampa Bay against New Orleans.

What stands out is how much room Brian had. Patrick Mahomes, the week's biggest bust on this side, managed just 5.3 for Kansas City against Houston, Bijan Robinson finished with 7.4 for Atlanta against Seattle, and Romeo Doubs gave him 0.0. And yet, First in and First Out? still pushed well past projection, because Etienne found the end zone twice, Zay Flowers gave Baltimore 12.6 against Pittsburgh on 124 receiving yards, Jaylen Waddle scored 13.1, and the lineup kept moving from spot to spot.

On the other side, Dakota never found enough healthy ground to stay in range. Dak Prescott was the best of it with 18.44 for Dallas against Detroit, Caleb Williams added 14.94 for Chicago against Green Bay, and Jordan Mason gave Minnesota 11.2 with a rushing touchdown. But BearDown absorbed too many empty spots. Tyrone Tracy, Brian Robinson, Wan'Dale Robinson, Xavier Legette, Matt Gay, and New England's defense all finished at 0.0, while Travis Kelce managed 0.8 and George Pickens 3.7.

There were points left on Dakota's bench, with Jacoby Brissett at 19.04 and Omarion Hampton at 12.7, but this was not a narrow start-sit story. Brian simply had more playable totals in more places, and that is the sharp observation that fits a 97.18-point margin. In a week where even Mahomes did not have to carry the load, First in and First Out? looked very much like the team that has spent the season living above the line.

The concrete consequence is an important one. Brian extends First in and First Out?'s run to 14 straight weeks above 150, a season-long standard that keeps the pressure on the rest of FoulknFootball with only one week left in the regular season.

Storylines

- The No. 4 seed is still the pressure point, and Jake's five-game losing streak has turned Week 15 into a direct test of whether Seasonal Depression can still hold the line.
- Brian's five-game win streak now meets Rob, and the sharper angle is the larger one: First in and First Out? has not dipped below 150 all season.
- Michael has climbed to No. 3 and carries a six-week run of 150-plus into the final regular-season game, which gives Disappointment a chance to turn a rescue mission into a firm playoff seat.

- Dave and Eric sit on opposite sides of the current cut line, so one more big total from He hate me could preserve the top-two shape while forcing Sanders Boutte on Sunday to chase help.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	12-2-0	W5	2640.82	2315.64
2	He hate me	Dave	9-5-0	W4	2627.38	2537.48
3	Disappointment	Michael	7-7-0	W1	2361.52	2318.22
4	Seasonal Depression	Jake	6-8-0	L5	2422.84	2402.76
5	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	6-8-0	L1	2392.86	2378.86
6	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	6-8-0	L1	2365.02	2519.18
7	Amon Another level	Devin	6-8-0	W1	2271.72	2364.56
8	BearDown	Dakota	4-10-0	L3	2143.04	2388.50

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	95.3	178.46
2	—	He hate me	Dave	94.4	194.77
3	▲ 1	Disappointment	Michael	83.7	175.15
4	▲ 2	Seasonal Depression	Jake	81.9	162.63
5	▽ 2	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	81.3	162.33
6	▽ 1	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	80.9	163.70
7	—	Amon Another level	Devin	77.9	156.95
8	—	BearDown	Dakota	68.5	127.02

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W5), He hate me (W4). Cold spell: Seasonal Depression (L5), BearDown (L3).

Trending down: BearDown (last 3 avg 127.0 vs season 153.1, -17%).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 14 straight weeks.
- He hate me has scored 150+ in 6 straight weeks.
- Disappointment has scored 150+ in 6 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	166.8 – 129.6	Lock	14 straight above 150
Amon Another level vs Seasonal Depression	Seasonal Depression	138.7 – 131.4	Lean	5-game slide on the line
Disappointment vs BearDown	Disappointment	149.8 – 121.9	Lock	6 straight above 150
He hate me vs Sanders Boutte on Sunday	He hate me	171.2 – 139.8	Lock	4-game win streak

Predictions

- First in and First Out? wins by 30 or more, reaching at least 160 points and extending its winning streak from 5 to 6 games.
- He hate me clears 165 points in a decisive victory, while Sanders Boutte on Sunday stays under 145, keeping Dave's club in the No. 2 spot.
- Disappointment beats BearDown by at least 20 points, and BearDown's losing streak reaches 4 with another week below 130.
- Seasonal Depression stops the skid at 5 losses with a win of 7 to 15 points, and Amon Another level remains outside the top 4 heading into the bracket cut.
- By the end of Week 15, the top of the power board remains steady: First in and First Out? No. 1, He hate me No. 2, Disappointment No. 3.