

Week 15 Recap — FoulknFootball (2025)

Generated 2026-04-27 00:44 UTC.

Stakes this week

- Bubble watch — Disappointment (#3) vs He hate me (#2) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- Bubble watch — Seasonal Depression (#4) vs First in and First Out? (#1) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- Bubble watch — Sanders Boutte on Sunday (#5) vs BearDown (#8) — A loss here could push the loser into the consolation bracket (top 4 make the playoff bracket).
- Hottest team in the league — First in and First Out? has won 6 straight — Brian hasn't lost in over a month and a half. Anyone drawing them is the underdog by default.
- BearDown on a 4-game losing streak — Dakota's squad needs a win to stop the bleeding.

Intro

The regular season is closed now, and FoulknFootball has a cleaner picture because Week 15 forced it to happen. Brian stayed where he has been for a while now, steady at the top and now on a six-game winning streak, while the middle of the table finally gave up some of its ambiguity. Jake's 237.94-point decisive victory was the highest score of the week, and it arrived at exactly the right moment for a team that had spent the past month trying to stop the slide before the bracket locked.

That is the shape of this week. Some teams entered needing style points, others simply needed survival, and a few found out there is a difference. The highest-scoring game belonged to Jake and Devin, but the larger frame reached across the whole league: Brian kept the standard in place, Dave absorbed a costly loss at the wrong time, Michael finished strong again, and Dakota's season ended with the standings saying plainly what the last few weeks had been hinting.

League Themes

The dominant storyline still starts with Brian, because six straight wins changes the tone of an entire league. First in and First Out? finished the regular season at 13-2, stayed No. 1 in the power rankings, and extended its run of 150 or more points to all 15 weeks. It is the rare kind of season where consistency becomes the headline, and Brian's club has made that feel almost ordinary. One sharp detail says enough: even in a week where Travis Etienne's 28.5 was the team's best line, the larger point was once again the floor.

Jake supplied the week's biggest statement. Seasonal Depression jumped up one spot to No. 3 in the power rankings and posted the league-high 237.94 in a 50.38-point win over Devin, which is the sort of total that changes how next week is viewed. After the five-game skid noted in last week's recap, this was an answer with real force behind it. Jake did it with range more than luck, and that matters more in December.

The top individual performances were spread across the league, but a few stood above the rest. James Cook and TreVeyon Henderson combined for 57.2 points for Dave, even in a loss, while Bo Nix gave Rob 29.08 and reminded everyone how much a quarterback can swing a week when he clears projection by that margin. Devin got 28.4 from Amon-Ra St. Brown, one of the cleanest star turns on the board, and Brian kept moving with Etienne's 28.5. Those names built the week, but they also revealed something else: several teams that lost still had enough top-end scoring to remain relevant one week later.

The most useful waiver move belonged to Jake. Colby Parkinson produced 19.5 points right away, and in a week decided by bracket position that is exactly the kind of add that earns mention. Eric also found worthwhile help with Jacory Croskey-Merritt at 15.6 and got serviceable quarterback production from Marcus Mariota, while Brian picked up 9.4 from Michael Carter. There were no trades, which is not surprising this late in the year; most managers were making smaller corrections, not reshaping the roster.

A few stat lines bent the week in obvious ways, and they were large enough to deserve the space. Bo Nix more than doubled his projection at 29.1 against 12.7, Kirk Cousins came in at 26.9 against 8.1, and Trey McBride posted 25.4 against 11.4. On the other side, Jahmyr Gibbs' 5.8 against a 24.4 projection was one of the week's real jolts, George Pickens gave just 3.3 against 13.9, and Christian Watson's 2.9 against 14.2 left points missing where they usually live. Dakota's downturn remained the clearest season-long warning sign. BearDown closed on a four-game losing streak, and the last-three scoring average still sits well below the season rate. By now, that is not variance. It is form.

There is also a fair grade to apply to last week's forecast. The calls on Brian, Michael, and Jake all landed, and each of those outcomes held to the basic shape that was projected. The miss came in Eric's game against Dave, where the pick leaned toward He hate me and Sanders Boutte on Sunday turned it with the week's narrowest winning margin, 227.94 to 195.74. That result fit the larger truth of Week 15: a few teams did exactly what they had been doing for weeks, and one or two changed the conversation right at the line.

Game by Game

Seasonal Depression (237.94) vs Amon Another level (187.56)

Jake's Seasonal Depression answers the pressure and closes the regular season with a decisive victory.

In the final week of the FoulknFootball regular season, with the bracket about to lock, Seasonal Depression did not leave much to interpretation. Jake beat Devin, 237.94 to 187.56, in a high-stakes battle that turned into a clear result by the end. The score was large on both sides. The difference was that Jake had strength in more places, and he kept finding it all afternoon.

The hero was Brock Purdy. San Francisco's quarterback gave Jake 26.2 points against Tennessee with 295 passing yards, three touchdowns, and 44 rushing yards, and that set the tone for a lineup that stayed on schedule. Josh Jacobs added 21.2 for Green Bay against Denver, D'Andre Swift scored 21.6 for Chicago against Cleveland with two rushing touchdowns, and Jameson Williams brought 19.4 for Detroit against the Rams on 134 yards and a score. Puka Nacua was right there too, with 18.9 for the Rams against Detroit, while Ka'imi Fairbairn and the Bears defense each delivered 18.0.

On the other side, Devin had more than a few professional efforts of his own. Amon-Ra St. Brown was the best of them, catching 13 balls for 164 yards and two touchdowns for Detroit against the Rams on his way to 28.4 points. Kirk Cousins gave Devin 26.92, Jaxson Dart added 22.14, and Dallas Goedert chipped in 19.0 with two touchdown catches for Philadelphia against Las Vegas. And yet, this game was decided in the quieter spots, where Justin Jefferson finished with 2.2, Stefon Diggs had 2.6, Hunter Henry posted 1.8, and Evan McPherson gave him 0.0.

Jake left 23.5 points from J.J. McCarthy on the bench, while Devin had 24.0 from the Ravens defense sitting there, but this was not really a start-sit story. Seasonal Depression simply carried a sturdier middle. Sam Darnold's 11.34 mattered. Kenneth Gainwell's 12.6 mattered. Javonte Williams' 15.1 mattered. One sharp detail says most of it: Jake got four backs into double figures, and that gave Devin too much to cover even with St. Brown leading the way.

The consequence is a simple one, and an important one after last week's five-game slide: Jake stops the losing streak in the regular-season finale and does it against a direct competitor for the last playoff ground.

Sanders Boutte on Sunday (227.94) vs He hate me (195.74) — Cousin Bowl

Cousin Bowl: Eric lands the decisive victory Dave could not quite cover.

In the final week of the FoulknFootball regular season, the cousin framing fit, but the bracket pressure mattered more. Eric's Sanders Boutte on Sunday beat Dave's He hate me, 227.94 to 195.74, in a high-stakes battle that carried real weight at the cut line. This was not a narrow game. It was a deep one, and Eric had more answers across the card.

The hero was Trey McBride. Arizona's tight end gave Eric 25.4 points against Houston on 12 catches for 134 yards and two touchdowns, while Darren Waller added 18.6 with two scores of his own and C.J. Stroud supplied 23.4 for Houston with three touchdown passes against Arizona. Jason Myers' 22.0 from the kicking spot mattered too, and Jacory Croskey-Merritt's 15.6 for Washington against the Giants was one of those numbers that changes the shape of a Sunday. Our call last week to ride Dave was a miss, plain and simple; the win streak we cited for He hate me stopped here, and Eric's tight ends were the detail we did not give enough weight.

On the other side, Dave still posted a number that wins plenty of weeks. James Cook led the way with 29.1 for Buffalo against New England, TreVeyon Henderson brought 28.1 for New England against Buffalo, and Josh Allen added 24.52 with three touchdown passes. Kyren Williams gave the Rams 20.8 against Detroit, Matthew Stafford threw for 368 yards and finished at 20.92, and for stretches He hate me looked fully capable of carrying the week.

And yet, the sharper detail sits with the pass-catching spots around those backs and quarterbacks. Brock Bowers finished with 2.8, Tetairoa McMillan had 2.5, Rashee Rice gave Dave 5.1 despite 11 targets, and Harold Fannin scored 5.0 on 14 targets. Eric had misses of his own — Breece Hall scored 3.7, Kayshon Boutte 3.0, and Zach Charbonnet 3.1 — but Sanders Boutte on Sunday kept finding enough strength elsewhere to keep the margin intact.

The consequence is a clear one from last week's ledger. Dave's run of six straight games above 150 points continues, but the four-game winning streak for He hate me ends in Week 15, and Eric closes the regular season with the kind of total that kept the bracket picture moving all the way to the line.

First in and First Out? (180.26) vs Unstoppable Farce (138.08) — Brother Bowl

Brother Bowl: Brian closes the regular season with a decisive victory over Rob.

The final week of the FoulknFootball regular season brought the Brother Bowl at exactly the right time, with bracket positions settling and very little room left for a soft afternoon. Brian's First in and First Out? handled that setting the way it has handled most of this season, beating Rob's Unstoppable Farce 180.26 to 138.08. It was a high-stakes battle on the schedule, but the result itself was firm.

The hero was Travis Etienne. New Orleans' back gave Brian 28.5 points, catching three touchdown passes against the Jets, and he had real support from Bijan Robinson's 21.5 for Atlanta, Nico Collins' 20.5 for Houston, and Zay Flowers' 12.8 for Baltimore. The call to ride First in and First Out? held up, and this time it was fairly close to script — projected at 166.8-129.6, delivered at 180.26-138.08.

On the other side, Rob got the kind of quarterback production that usually keeps a team in range. Bo Nix threw for 302 yards and four touchdowns for Denver on his way to 29.08, while Jalen Hurts added 22.9 for Philadelphia and Jauan Jennings scored 15.7 with two touchdown catches. And yet, this matchup turned on how many quiet spots Unstoppable Farce had to carry. Christian Watson finished with 2.9, Ladd McConkey had 2.0, Mike Gesicki scored 1.1, Isaiah Likely gave Rob 0.0, and the lineup never found enough middle to match Brian's top-end totals.

Brian was not perfect, which is part of what makes the number stand out. Patrick Mahomes managed 13.06 for Kansas City, Jonathan Taylor had 10.1 for Indianapolis, and Quinshon Judkins was held to 1.7 for Cleveland, but First in and First Out? still had enough coverage to keep control of the game. One sentence says a good deal here: Brian posted 180.26 even with Dalton Schultz's 13.6 and Brandon McManus' 16.0 left on the bench.

The consequence is plain. Brian extends First in and First Out?'s winning streak from five games to six, and just as important, he finishes the FoulknFootball regular season having cleared 150 points in all 15 weeks.

Disappointment (173.58) vs BearDown (116.04) — Brother Bowl (Gen 2)

Brother Bowl (Gen 2): Michael locks in the regular-season finish with a decisive victory.

In the final week of the FoulknFootball regular season, the Brother Bowl carried the kind of weight that does not need much decoration. Michael's Disappointment handled Dakota's BearDown, 173.58 to 116.04, and the margin told the story plainly. This was a high-stakes battle on the schedule because the bracket was settling into place, but Disappointment never needed a perfect card to control it.

The hero was Drake Maye. The New England quarterback gave Michael 20.5 points against Buffalo, running for 43 yards and two touchdowns, while Baker Mayfield added 19.18 for Tampa Bay against Atlanta. Michael also got useful work from DJ Moore's 18.9, George Kittle's 14.8 for San Francisco against Tennessee, Brandon Aubrey's 14.6, and Philadelphia's defense with 16.0. The sharp point here is simple: Disappointment reached 173.58 even with Jahmyr Gibbs held to 5.8 and Kenneth Walker to 1.9, which is what depth looks like in December.

On the other side, Dakota had one strong answer in Tyrone Tracy. The Giants back scored 21.7 against Washington with a rushing touchdown and a receiving touchdown, and Caleb Williams added 18.98 for Chicago against Cleveland while Ja'Marr Chase brought 13.2 for Cincinnati against Baltimore. And yet, BearDown took on too many empty or near-empty spots. David Njoku finished at 0.0, Matt Gay at 0.0, New England's defense at -2.0, and Zonovan Knight at -0.2, which left Dakota chasing the game rather than shaping it.

There was also a start-sit gap, and it was large enough to matter. Michael left 17.3 points on the bench, while Dakota left 55.10, with Jacoby Brissett's 20.56 and Cam Little's 12.0 standing out most clearly. In a game decided by 57.54, that is not the whole story, but it is part of it.

The consequence is a clear one. Michael's Disappointment extends its run to seven straight weeks above 150 points and closes the regular season exactly where last week's power board had it: No. 3 in FoulknFootball.

Storylines

- Brian's six-game winning streak now carries into the bracket, and the question is whether the league's most reliable 150-point machine can keep making "steady" feel inevitable.
- The No. 4 spot may be settled on paper, but Jake's late surge changed the texture of that side of the bracket in a way seeding alone does not capture.
- Michael and Dave arrive at Week 16 as a power-ranking one-step matchup, and that game now looks closer than the seed line suggests.
- Dakota enters the consolation side with the coldest recent trend in FoulknFootball, which puts immediate weight on whether BearDown can stop the slide before it defines the finish.

Standings (snapshot)

Rank	Team	Owner	W-L-T	Streak	PF	PA
1	First in and First Out?	Brian	13-2-0	W6	2821.08	2453.72
2	He hate me	Dave	9-6-0	L1	2823.12	2765.42
3	Disappointment	Michael	8-7-0	W2	2535.10	2434.26
4	Seasonal Depression	Jake	7-8-0	W1	2660.78	2590.32
5	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	7-8-0	W1	2620.80	2574.60
6	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	6-9-0	L2	2503.10	2699.44
7	Amon Another level	Devin	6-9-0	L1	2459.28	2602.50
8	BearDown	Dakota	4-11-0	L4	2259.08	2562.08

Power rankings

#	Move	Team	Owner	Power	Last-3 PF
1	—	First in and First Out?	Brian	96.2	184.27
2	—	He hate me	Dave	94.0	195.87
3	▲ 1	Seasonal Depression	Jake	88.2	191.95
4	▲ 1	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	Eric	87.0	189.24
5	▽ 2	Disappointment	Michael	83.0	167.48
6	▲ 1	Amon Another level	Devin	80.0	170.50
7	▽ 1	Unstoppable Farce	Rob	78.7	156.27
8	—	BearDown	Dakota	64.4	106.79

Season ledger

Hot hand: First in and First Out? (W6), Disappointment (W2). Cold spell: BearDown (L4), Unstoppable Farce (L2). Trending down: BearDown (last 3 avg 106.8 vs season 150.6, -29%).

- First in and First Out? has scored 150+ in 15 straight weeks.
- He hate me has scored 150+ in 7 straight weeks.
- Disappointment has scored 150+ in 7 straight weeks.

Forecast

Matchup	Pick	Projected Score	Confidence	X-Factor
Unstoppable Farce vs Amon Another level	Amon Another level	141.3 – 132.8	Lean	Devin projection edge
Disappointment vs He hate me	He hate me	169.8 – 160.6	Lean	150+ in 7 straight
Seasonal Depression vs First in and First Out?	First in and First Out?	158.4 – 153.1	Coin Flip	150+ in 15 straight
Sanders Boutte on Sunday vs BearDown	Sanders Boutte on Sunday	146.7 – 112.9	Lock	BearDown down 29.1% lately

Predictions

- First in and First Out? beats Seasonal Depression by 1-7 points, and Brian extends the winning streak to 7 straight while keeping the 150+ streak alive for a 16th consecutive week.
- He hate me reaches at least 165 points and defeats Disappointment, stretching Dave's 150+ streak to 8 straight weeks against a Disappointment team that has also cleared 150 in 7 straight.
- Amon Another level tops 138 points and hands Unstoppable Farce a third consecutive loss, a clean upset of recent trend even if the projection already leans Devin's way.
- Sanders Boutte on Sunday wins by 25 or more, and BearDown stays under 120 points for the second time in the last three weeks as the 4-game losing streak grows to 5.
- Of the four winners above, Sanders Boutte on Sunday posts the lowest winning score above 145, a sign of how wide the gap is in that matchup compared with the two semifinal games.